The North of England is home to a diverse and talented community of tutors, each making a meaningful difference in the lives of their students. By bringing these tutors together, we have an opportunity to build something even more powerful, a connected, collaborative network that elevates standards, shares knowledge, and strengthens the role of tutoring across the UK.

I am committed to supporting The Tutor Association's presence across Northumberland, Tyne and Wear, and the wider North by helping to create that sense of connection. Through local drop-ins and community engagement, I want to make it easier for tutors to meet, exchange ideas, and feel part of a wider professional community.

This is about opening doors. Reaching tutors who may not yet be aware of the benefits of the TTA, and showing them the value of being part of a network that supports growth, quality, and shared purpose.

It is also about listening. Learning from current TTA members, understanding what works, and helping to build on that success by sharing best practice across the region.

A connected tutoring community has the potential to do more than support tutors, it can contribute to improving outcomes for students and play a meaningful role in shaping the future of education.

By strengthening relationships, raising standards, and creating opportunities for collaboration, we can ensure that tutors across the North are not only supported, but empowered to make an even greater impact. This is about building something together and ensuring the North plays a leading role in that future.
